Also, thank you to those of you who have been writing reviews for the new book, Mind and Brain: Separate but Integrated. Here's one I particularly appreciated:

“Dr. Lehman's book came when I needed to be reminded of the profound connection between the biological brain and the mind/spirit. This is a wake-up call for mental health professionals to jolt us out of our polarized, misguided beliefs that “our way” is the only way. Dr. Karl makes it clear that there is a time and place for psychotropic medications and a time and place for non-biological faith-based approaches. And there is a time and place for both at the same time. This book should be required reading for training as a mental health professional across broad disciplines including psychiatry, psychiatric nurse practitioners, licensed counselors, pastors, social workers, and psychologists, as examples.”

Blessings,

Dr. Lehman/Karl
